Laser-Assisted Liposuction vs. Traditional Liposuction: Which is Right for Me?

According to a recent statistics report from the American Society of Plastic Surgeons (ASPS), in 2008, doctors performed over 12 million cosmetic plastic surgery procedures - encompassing both surgical and minimally-invasive procedures. But while surgical numbers dropped nine percent last year, minimally-invasive numbers actually rose five percent.

Dr. Mark Hagberg says that modern laser-assisted liposuction techniques may be a factor in the decline of overall surgical procedures. He said he sees more and more people turning away from traditional methods of fat removal the longer laser-assisted liposuction is available, and the more familiar people become with the advantages of laser lipolysis technology.

"When compared to patients who undergo traditional liposuction, laser liposuction patients typically experience faster recovery times, less discomfort and a more gentle procedure," he says. "There is less bruising and none of the complications associated with general anesthesia when tumescent anesthesia is used." He explained that tumescent anesthesia is a type of local anesthesia where the patient is not 'put to sleep', but is kept relaxed and comfortable. Dr. Hagberg continued, "Another major advantage is that ProLipo provides additional skin tightening that is not possible with traditional liposuction."
